

Corporate Social Responsibility

- Work placements, work experience, internships and apprenticeships
- Sponsorship of further education for Clients young engineers
- Transfer of knowledge to locals and capacity building
- Commitment to reducing energy consumption
- Responsible procurement strategy
- Ensuring community participation
- Staff fund-raising activities
- Respect for local cultures
- Delivering results and making positive impact on lives

It's not just a nod in the right direction - it's what makes us tick.

For decades, Roughton's business has embodied a belief that projects are opportunities to improve the environment and communities within which they are delivered.

Our objectives and measures of success are not simply happy clients and growing revenues, of course these are important, but so are the positive impacts we have made on social welfare, staff development and sustainable, innovative improvements to our working practices.

Community engagement is an important part of the projects that we undertake. This ranges from holding workshops within the community to enable local residents to contribute their opinion on projects in their area, to sponsoring local events and activities. We believe in making a positive contribution to the communities that we work in.

